“Jeanette’s presentation on cultural sovereignty talked a lot about the law, each segment of her discussion was tied to how important the language was and how the tribe understood the agreements they were entering into,” he said. “Some of the case law that solidified our treaty rights, like the Tinno case regarding “fishing rights” – we call it hunting because that’s how we go after the salmon, we walk the streams and spear them – that’s how they won that court case against the state of Idaho.”

Shay noted the agenda was really tight each day, with varied presentations ranging from language, culture, environmental, education and health, which kept the events moving along quickly. “The reunion planning committee has been working for several months trying to put this event together, including Language & Culture Preservation (LCPD) – they provided equipment, the Tribal Health programs, like the Cedar House (Waapi Kani Mental Wellness & Recovery Services), they did a lot of volunteering and kept things in order,” he said.

“I want to thank all the supporters, staff that contributed their ideas, and those that stepped up to volunteer and present – the old volunteers, plus all the new ones,” Shay said. He noted that this was the biggest group of volunteers they have had, with some volunteering for the first time. “I’ve always been trying to get younger people involved so they’ll learn how to be a part of and run an event like this in the future.”

August 6

The first day of reunion events began with a sunrise ceremony on the morning of Tuesday, August 6. The Shoshone-Bannock Tribes served as host of the first day of events starting at sunrise in the old Fort Hall Casino parking lot where visiting members of participating tribes of the reunion came out for a prayer and smudge led by tribal elder and Sho-Ban reunion co-coordinator Darrell Shay.

Shay welcomed visiting tribes to the Shoshone-Bannock homelands and spoke about the history of the reservation and the surrounding areas. Local drummers led the prayer songs at sunrise.

The reunion continued at the Shoshone-Bannock Casino Hotel event center with a flag ceremony; the U.S., military and participating tribes’ flags were posted by veterans. Medicine Thunder and Spring Creek Singers served as drums for the opening.

A full breakfast was served to participants as the host – the Sho-Ban Tribes – opened the welcome ceremony for the first day of events. Michelle Hernandez gave the introduction to visiting tribal leaders from Eastern Shoshone, Northern Paiute, Western Shoshone, Comanche and Ute tribes where a representative each introduced themselves and said a few words about their nations.

Miss Shoshone-Bannock and visiting royalty each gave welcome remarks.

Council Chairman Lee Juan Tyler Tendoy greeted reunion participants and sang a prayer song.

The keynote speaker was tribal attorney Jeanette Wolfley giving a presentation on tribal sovereignty.

Environmental Waste Management Program staff followed with a presentation on the impacts that mining has on traditional plant gathering.

The afternoon session brought the day’s events to Shoshone-Bannock Jr./Sr. High School with presentations by the Language & Culture Preservation Department, Native American Church history and “Teaching with Purpose: A New Approach to Teaching Shoshone,” presented by Alfred Jackson (Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone, Elko Band), Brenda Jackson and Victoria Jackson (Fort McDermitt Paiute-Shoshone Tribes). Sack lunch was served.

Breakout sessions followed including shell project making hosted by the Abrahamson family, “Know Your Family,” a family tree project by LCPD, Denewap – Ways of life for women presentation by Velda Racehorse, doll making, and tule pouch making instructed by Great Basin Native Basketweavers Association Chairperson and Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Elko Band councilmember Leah Brady.

Dinner was served at the Sho-Ban school cafeteria.

Evening activities resumed at the Delbert Farmer Dance Arbor emceed by Michelle Hernandez. Traditional games were played including an Indian stick horse relay race, followed by a presentation by the Comanche Nation to conclude the first day of events.

August 7

The second day of events began with sunrise services hosted by the Eastern Shoshone Tribe.

After breakfast was served at the Sho-Ban Casino Hotel event center, Shoshone-Bannock athletes Minnie Buton and Rose LaRose were recognized in being part of the 1904 World’s Fair Women’s Basketball championship team, with their descendants being present at the presentation.

Shoshone-Bannock

Tribes LCPD conducted language presentations throughout the morning.

The afternoon activities took place at Shoshone-Bannock Jr./Sr. High School that included the final breakout sessions, including Denewap – Way of life for men, moccasin making by Weldon Broncho, Shoshone Legends and traditional plant presentations.

Two challenges concluded the afternoon session – a fry bread making contest and an archery competition.

The evening events concluded at the Delbert Farmer Dance Arbor with a traditional and contemporary fashion show and giveaways hosted by the Eastern Shoshone Tribe and Nevada Shoshone tribes following, and the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe hosted a Bear Dance presentation.

August 8

The reunion concluded with sunrise services hosted by the Comanche Nation, and a closing prayer and retiring flags ceremony.

Visiting tribes were invited to participate in the Shoshone-Bannock Indian Festival Kid’s Day parade on Thursday morning after the reunion.

Reunion co-coordinator Darrell Shay said in addition to the 1,045 registered attendees across the three days, the attendance numbers could be higher, since some days guests registered at the door. “We had a few hiccups with registration before the first day, but we kept it moving once the activities started.”

LCPD highlights "Knowing your family tree" at Shoshonean Reunion

By JOSEPH WADSWORTH
Sho-Ban News

FORT HALL — Language and Cultural Preservation Department (LCPD) Ancestral Researcher Manuelita Waterhouse presented a workshop about Knowing your Family - Family Tree project at the Shoshonean Reunion August 6.

The workshop was on ancestral family research and to let people know where she had gotten her information from. It was for families to have a way to look for themselves. Waterhouse said right now she only is able to work with enrolled Shoshone-Bannock tribal members families and individuals.

"I like it because ever since I got introduced on researching it's fun to find out all of the information," Waterhouse said. Regarding the workshop she believes it went fine, having questions from individuals and that she was glad to have answers for them.

She said, "there is a lot of information out there that everyone needs to look up that they can utilize, I tell them they just better double check to make sure its accurate information because a lot of people out there want to be added to our Indian people."

Waterhouse can be reached at the LCPD for help with family ancestry research.

FORT HALL – The Abrahamson Family hosted a breakout session during the first day of the Shoshonean Reunion on August 6, to share their knowledge of shells.

FORT HALL – The Fort Hall 4-H/Extension Program had 12 youth enrolled in market lamb projects this summer.

Participants included Paizlee Furniss, Chole Weed, Dayton Tendore, Kirstyn Farmer, Kiara Farmer, Kelanna Edmo, Kaylanna Edmo, Kei’Ana Medicine Top, Gator Boyd, Sholee Atcity, Cali Tinno, and Thomas Eagle.

All youth worked diligently this spring and summer to prepare themselves and their lambs for the Bingham County 4-H Fair and Livestock Market Sale. They were delighted that all lambs met the minimum weight requirement of 110 pounds to show and sale. Our smallest lamb weighed 114 pounds while our largest lamb weighed a whopping 151 pounds!

The youth selected top-quality animals and did an excellent job feeding and caring for them. They worked hard all summer to ensure their lambs made weight. All youth had their animals trained for the showing by the time the county fair arrived August 5th.

Several educational activities were held for the youth in addition to the daily feeding, caring, training, and showing the youth were required to complete to prepare for the fair. The activities focused on how to raise and feed their animals properly and how to fit and show the lamb they chose to the best of the youth’s abilities.

Each youth was required to learn how to calculate average daily gain, keep an inventory of their supplies, and keep health, expense, and income records. They were also required to write a story about their project and complete a demonstration of a livestock skill to the entire club.

The youth learned animal parts, basic conformation traits, and sheep breeds. Additionally, the youth completed two fundraising activities which included baking and selling sugar cookies and making and selling breakfast burritos to help raise money for their project expenses.

A mock fair was held for the youth to practice their showmanship skills on July 29. They all had their sheep shorn for the county fair August 2nd. The grand finale of the project was to show their animals at the Bingham County 4-H Fair in both showmanship and quality classes August 5th.

All of the youth earned and received blue ribbons in fitting and showing and quality classes. Kiara Farmer even advanced to the top showman class in the junior division, which is quite an accomplishment. She placed fifth in the overall round of junior showmen.

All youth sold their lambs at the Bingham County 4-H Fair, Wednesday, August 7. The lamb projects taught the youth invaluable leadership skills, work ethics, and responsibility. We are immensely proud of our kids and the challenging projects they completed this summer! They were exceptional sportsmen and sportswomen at the fair. We would like to give a big thanks to all of our youth, their parents, and their guardians for making this program possible.

Over 400 Fort Hall projects entered in Bingham County 4-H Fair

BLACKFOOT – Over 400 Fort Hall 4-H projects were entered in the Bingham County 4-H Fair this year. All Fort Hall Projects received 1st place - Blue Ribbons. These projects, excluding Clover Bud projects, will be entered into the Eastern Idaho State Fair in September.

Emma Matsaw received a Judges Choice Rosette for her Macrame Project. Eva Amos received a Judges Choice in the Canvas Painting division.

Clover Bud projects (ages 5-8) received a multi-colored ribbon.

The fair itself is a wonderful educational activity and a showcase for all the hard work and dedication that 4-H members have shown to their projects and clubs throughout the year.
